AROLD BEGBIE, the English author and Joseph Pennell G. J. B. Lippincott Company), they are not as charming as the story Mrs. Pennell tells. It is in the main an autobiography, the story of her girlhood and paying America an initial visit. Mr. Begbie's fame had, however, preceded him, for as the writer of "Twice Born Men," a book which attained a wider popularity than any other of its kind published in this country, he had become widely and favorably known. The subtitle of this book is "A Clinic in Regeneration" and the writer described it as "a footnote to William James's "The Varieties of Religious Experience." Prof. James, on reading it, declared that his own book might very well be regarded as a footnote to Mr. Begbie's.

JOSEPH C. LINCOLN'S GREATEST NOVEL

KENT KNOWLES:

"Quahaug"

By JOSEPH C. LINCOLN

Author of "Cap'n Dan's Daughter," "Mr. Pratt's Patients," etc.

A big, breezy, wholesome and amusing story that will make you forget the war. If you have ever read any of Mr. Lincoln's novels you will need no urging to read his latest. If not, this is a good time to begin, for he has never written a better one. Kent Knowles is a writer of adventure who leads a secluded bachelor life in Bayport, Cape Cod. The villagers call him "quahaug" or clam. His vein of fancy having become exhausted, he goes abroad in search of new ideas with his cousin Hephzibah, a typical New England spinster. In England unexpected complications arise and in the end the "quahaug" brings home a wife. In the telling of this charming romance many humorous contrasts are drawn between English and American manners and customs.

THE WONDER-FUL ROMANCE

By Pierre de Coulevain

By the Author of "On the Branch"

This is a time when we want a book to remind us that there is still much good in the world; that beauty may be concealed but cannot be destroyed; that happiness may be hidden but cannot be lost; that there is a possible smile behind the bitterest tears. Here is such a book.

47 Editions of "The Wonderful Romance" have already been printed in France, where it far exceeds in popularity any of the author's former books. Price, $1.35 net.

Harold Bell Wright has written an unusual story, says The Portland Oregonian.

It is that rare event, a pure love story. The Birmingham Age-Herald says there is not one dull page in it. The San Francisco Chronicle says it is full of keen interest. The Grand Rapids Herald says it is the most intense and dramatic novel of today.

HE EYES OF THE WORLD

Beyond a doubt, says The Kansas City Star, the author has written a book that will rank with "The Shepherd of the Hills" and "The Winning of Barbara Worth." The Albany Argus says Mr. Wright's latest novel is far ahead of any previous one, The Terre Haute Star says it represents the best of the new order of fiction that has marked all of Mr. Wright's novels.

Says the hero: "A week ago I was an editor in London and afraid of everything and everybody. Now I've been in the river and I've stolen a ride on a wagon, and I've had a devil of a fight with a wagoner, and I've kloked a policeman head over heels into a ditch, and I've been nearly burnt alive and I've broken out through the roof of a barn and failen a frightful buster off it, and I've slung a chap into a pond, and I've nearly killed a chap and half-drowned him in milk, and I've nailed a man to the floor by his nightshirt, and I've jumped out of a high whodow and been chased for my life, and I've slune a ride in a motor car, and where the devil I am now I haven't the remotest Idea." And all this before the book is scarcely a third under way.
